DRY REPEAL BILLS PRECIPITATE BATTLE

TWO SOLONS LAUNCH DARING ATTACKS ON OHIO PROHIBITION

Expect Battle Lines Will Be Drawn For Long Fight

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—Ohio wets and dries today were preparing for a long and bitter fight over prohibition after the bomb-shell launching in both houses of the new legislature yesterday—a program designed to compel a test of public opinion of the dry experiment at a referendum in November.

Repeal of the prohibition amendment adopted by Ohio in 1918 was proposed by Representative Louis Nippert (R) of Cincinnati and Senator Joseph N. Ackerman (R) of Cleveland, and politicians here today were agreed that there is much more anti-dry legislation to come.

Haste in getting their measures presented shown by Nippert and Ackerman has aroused legislators who have been apathetic on the question and spurred the Ohio dry forces, led by the Anti-Saloon League, into activity.

Ackerman had at least three other bills ready to give to the senate, all to defeat prohibition, and Nippert, if he does not have similar proposals himself to be presented to the house, has colleagues who do.

Other senators and representatives are well-armed with anti prohibition bills, some similar and some different, but there will be no scarcity of proposed legislation on the subject. In fact, so many bills on the question will be presented after the legislature begins work next week, it was agreed today, that there will be long and tedious dickering over just which and whose bill will be taken up.

Besides bringing the Anti-Saloon League into defense action this morning, Ackerman's resolution, the first presented to the senate, brought a gasp from even his friends in that chamber.

It was a shock especially to Senator William H. Herner (D) of Monroeville, who had a bill of his

CITY, RURAL FIGHT MENACES PASSAGE OF FOOD LOAN BILL

Three-Cornered Fight
Develops Over Relief
Measure

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Republican chiefs of the house today assumed an attitude of "watchful waiting" toward the $45,000,000 seed and feed loan bill for drought-stricken areas as a conflict between city and rural members of the house threatened passage of the bill.

A three-cornered battle developed over the measure. The result of the amendment of Senator Carey, (D) of Arkansas, voted by the senate, adding $15,000,000 in food loans for farmers.

Republican leaders demanded that southern Democrats backing the Carey amendment abandon their fight for a vote in the house and permit the bill to go to conference.

At the same time some representatives from big urban centers declared they would fight for appropriations up to $50,000,000 to feed unemployed in cities if the bill carries money to buy food for farmers.

"We are going to let the matter simmer," said Representative Wood, (R) of Indiana, chairman of the appropriations committee. "I hope we will get an agreement."

Representatives Laguardia, (R) of New York, and Sabath, (D) of Illinois, were fighting the food proposal—unless it were made to apply to cities as well.

"My objection to the bill is that it is high time that some consideration be given to city people in need of aid as well as farmers," said Sabath.

Marshal Joffre Laid To Rest As Nation Grieves

PARIS, Jan. 7.—In majestic manner enriched by the presence of representatives from governments in many parts of the world, France said farewell to Marshal Joseph Jacques Césaire Joffre, the cooper's son from the hillside of the Pyrenees who became the hero of the Marne and the nation's idol.

As a last token of appreciation for a life of unstinted devotion and service to his country, France bestowed upon him the highest final honor it can offer—a national funeral.

The evenly spaced boom of twenty-one cannon shots signaled the start of the funeral march from Notre Dame, where high mass was read while hundreds of thousands patiently awaited the cortege. At 10:10 a. m. (5:10 a. m. Eastern Standard Time), the plain black coffin was carried down the steps of the Cathedral and placed upon a waiting gun carriage.

Twenty officers, one carrying the marshal's baton and the others the old warrior's numerous medals and decorations pinned to cushions, ranged themselves behind it. Six artillery horses, their harness tufted with crepe drew the gun carriage slowly from the steps.

It set in motion one of the most impressive processions ever witnessed in Paris.

The marshal's horse, the stirrups of the saddle reversed in token of its master's death, followed closely behind the gun carriage. Then came the marshal's family, headed by Madame Joffre.

Platoons of mounted republican guards, a detachment of artillery and a battalion of infantry with music and flags, led the cortege, French and allied army groups, war veterans' organizations, and flag bearers from all the regiments dissolved after the war, came next.

Following the body and a few steps behind the Joffre family marched in solid phalanx President Doumergue and his cabinet, including the presidents of the chamber and senate as well as members of the French government and diplomatic corps.

Platoons of mounted republican guards closed the cortege, which proceeded slowly over a carefully prescribed route to Les Invalides.

Ambassador Walter E. Edge represented the United States at Notre Dame and in the cortege, with thirty-four active and reserve American officers headed by a color guard composed jointly of members of the American Legion and members of the veterans of foreign wars officially representing

DEMOCRATS CHARGE BRICKER APPROVAL STRIKING AT WHITE

Claim Republicans Trying To Hinder New Governor

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—Chafing under Democratic charges that they are already trying to obstruct the program of Governor-elect George White, Republican state senators returned home today to await inauguration ceremonies Monday.

Republicans deliberately attempted to hinder the new governor when they used their numerical strength late Tuesday to force the confirmation of Gov. Myers V. Cooper's recess appointment of John W. Bricker, Columbus, to the state utilities commission. Democrats declared in an oratorical broadside begun to prevent the approval.

Democrats were eager to have the confirmation tabled to give White the right to name his personal selection from his own party after the inauguration.

"No matter what you call it you are depriving White of his control of the utilities commission for the next two years," Senator James A. Reynolds (D) of Cleveland, told Republicans.

On a basis of the vote for governor, at least thirteen of the eighteen Republican senators should have allowed White to pick his own man for the commission, Senator Reynolds added.

The "guilty," he said, included Earl R. Lewis, of St. Clairsville, president pro tem; C. J. Anderson, Shelby, who introduced the motion, asking the confirmation; Frank E. Whittemore, Akron, and one of the senators from his own district, L. L. Marshall, Cleveland.

When Republicans replied that their party deserved the appointment because it was made while legislation was not in session and added that Bricker is extraordinarily capable, Reynolds answered "that's baloney."

"This helps explain," he said, "why Ohio has been able to elect only four Republican governors in the last thirty years."

Continuing to scold Republicans, Reynolds said "you all say you want to cooperate with the governor, but which governor?" Senator W. A. Greenlund (D) of Lakewood joined him in the verbal attack.

FEDERAL PROBE OF MINE BLAST LAUNCHED; RECOVER BODIES

GLEN ROGERS, W. Va., Jan. 7.—With the bodies of eight miners who perished in a terrific explosion in the Glen Rogers mine of the Raleigh Wyoming Mining Co., brought to the surface, federal investigation into the cause of the blast was started today.

The bodies of the men, seven of whom were Negroes, were brought from the gas choked shaft last night. Rescue crews worked throughout the day groping through the gas and tearing away slate falls to reach the bodies. The gas and slate falls made rescue work exceedingly difficult.

Identification of the bodies was not completed until late last night. Final identification by officials of the colliery listed the fatality toll as follows:
D. H. Smith, white; James Feinando, Bennie Santo, Colonel Martin, Frank Taylor, John Tuck, Howard Rainey and Bruce Davis, Negroes.

TEN PLANES OF FLOTILLA ARE SAFE IN BRAZIL

Complete Flight At Once; Two Planes
Forced Down

NATAL, Brazil, Jan. 7.—Elated at the success in leading ten of his squadron of twelve seaplanes to a safe landing here after a formation flight from Italy and across 1,860 miles of ocean, General Italo Balbo today ordered immediate overhauling of all machines for an early resumption of the flight to its final destination.

The air squadron will next jump to Bahia, 625 miles away, and complete its spectacular 6,500-mile cruise by flying the final 644 miles to Rio De Janeiro.

Only a slight edge of misfortune marred what may be termed the most ambitious transatlantic group flight as yet staged. Two of the double-pontooned Savoia-Marchetti planes lined up for the water jump at Bolama, Africa, yesterday failed to reach the Brazilian mainland.

One of the participants, according to reports from Bolama, was forced down early in the flight by a heavy radiator. The crew was rescued by the Italian Cruiser De Reco.

The other plane was forced down near St. Peter's rocks, of the St. Paul group, 430 miles northeast of Brazil, by engine trouble. It was understood here that the plane was a complete wreck, but the crew was rescued by one of the Italian Cruisers patrolling the route of the flight.

The ten seaplanes negotiated the long hop from Portuguese East Africa in exactly eighteen hours and forty-six minutes. They left Orbetello, Italy on December 17, but were held up on the African coast by adverse weather.

First to land in the harbor here was the huge black machine piloted by General Balbo, Italian air minister and leader of the group. His squadron swooped down in two groups. The first batch of six planes headed by General Balbo cut through the water at 2:16 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time). The second group of four machines landed nineteen minutes later.

General Balbo and his thirty-nine companion fliers, welcomed enthusiastically by a large crowd and feted until late into the night, said the long ocean grind was marked by sudden rain squalls and thick banks of low-hanging clouds. Poor visibility finally forced him to signal the various units to spread out as much as possible.

"Near the Brazilian coast high winds rocked our ships severely," the flight commander stated. The planes, with the exception of the ones forced down, behaved splendidly all the way.

According to present plans, General Balbo expected to lead his formation group into Rio De Janeiro harbor Sunday, although this depends on the speed with which the machines can be prepared for the next hop-off.

BANK CASHIER HELD ON FORGERY CHARGE

LANCASTER, O., Jan. 7.—Charged with having embezzled approximately $100,000 from the Security Savings and Loan Co., Harry Jordon, cashier and secretary of the banking firm, today was under indictment on twenty-counts of forgery.

The bank official was indicted late Tuesday by a special session of the Fairfield County grand jury called by Prosecutor Russell S. Cunningham. The prosecutor said that Jordon had voluntarily confessed to him that his defalcation operations have been carried on for the past ten years and that he used fictitious mortgages to hide the shortages.

Prosecutor Cunningham declared that Jordon offered to give his property to the loan company to cover half of the loss. Jordon owns property in Lancaster valued at $50,000.

ARREST GOLFER PRO FOR INVESTIGATION IN GIRL'S MURDER

Quizzed By Police About Friendship For Slain Girl

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Ted Martin, 20, a professional golfer living in Philadelphia, was acquainted with Miss Beulah Limerick, 19, slain here today a week ago by a murderer who almost succeeded in deceiving the police of his crime by washing and powdering the body, and "concealing a bullet wound in the head by combing the hair."

Martin was detained by Philadelphia police for interrogation and today local detectives were in that city questioning him about his friendship with Miss Limerick.

Israel Solomon, with whom Martin lives, said the golfer visited Washington in November and was here Dec. 26 and 27 and returned to Philadelphia. He said Martin attended a party in Philadelphia Wednesday night, the night following the murder.

He was brought into the investigation by an anonymous telephone call to Philadelphia police. The caller said Martin might know something about the case.

Patrolman Robert F. Langdon, who patrolled the neighborhood in which Miss Limerick lived, will be taken before a coroner's jury tomorrow. He denied any knowledge of the crime but admitted he peeped into Miss Limerick's room on two different occasions, the night of the murder.

The first time he saw Miss Limerick talking with William E. Paddy, who had escorted her home from a dance. The next time he saw the girl lying in bed. He has been suspended from the department and is detained as a witness.

Others who will tell their stories to the coroner's jury are Vernon Limerick, the brother, and Richard Reed, a boarder at the home. They were the only other occupants of the house and each said he heard no shots.

Both said they do not know who washed the body and cleaned away the blood before the interne arrived, and who replaced the blood stained pillowcase before the police arrived.

Gun-Toting Bad-Man
Held Here After
Ruse Succeeds

Howard Whobrey, 18, Indianapolis, Ind., alleged by police to have abducted a Dayton taxicab driver and to have held up a farmer east of Xenia late Tuesday afternoon, is in custody of police—his desire for a cup of coffee leading to his capture.

The taxicab driver, who escaped his armed captor by means of a ruse and summoned police, is Leroy Stokes, 25, colored, 965 Iola St., Dayton, driver for the Peoples Taxi Co.

Found in possession of a .45 caliber Mauser automatic pistol, Whobrey was arraigned in Municipal Court Wednesday morning on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, pleaded guilty and was fined $300 and costs and sentenced to ninety days in jail by Judge E. Dawson Smith.

Police Chief O. H. Cornwell said he was advised, however, the youth is wanted in Dayton on a warrant charging a more serious offense and officers from Dayton were expected in Xenia Wednesday to return Whobrey there for prosecution.

Stokes told police that he was sent to answer a call for a cab at Fifth and Main Sts., in Dayton at 3 p. m. Tuesday. Whobrey entered the taxi and directed the driver to take him to Hoffman Hill in the eastern part of Dayton.

There Stokes said his passenger poked a pistol against his back and ordered him not to stop there but to "keep right on going and do as I say." The youth then reached past him and turned off the meter.

Covered by the revolver, Stokes drove through Xenia and Cedarville until about two miles east of the village when the taxi an out of gas.

Stokes said his passenger ordered him from the car and marched him to a nearby farmhouse, where Whobrey held up a farmer at the point of his gun and obtained two gallons of gasoline.

After replenishing the empty tank, the youth directed Stokes to turn around and drive back to Xenia, arriving in this city at 6:30 o'clock. Stokes was ordered to stop the car at Main and Columbus Sts.

There Stokes asked his passenger for permission to get a cup of coffee at the Cozy Corner pool room. Stokes added he would also bring his passenger a cup of coffee.

Whobrey yielded to the request warning Stokes that he would be "keeping an eye on him."

Stokes, however, phoned police from the restaurant and Patrolman Ed Craig found the youth waiting patiently in the taxi and arrested him, Whobrey had the pistol in his pocket.

Questioning of Whobrey disclosed no motive for the kidnapping although the youth admitted serving six months of a six year sentence to White's Manual Training Institute, Treaty, Ind., for a street car holdup in Indianapolis, December 8, 1927. He also said Dayton police wanted him in connection with the shooting of a dog at which he said he had fired to save himself from being bitten, but authorities in that city said they would not bring charges against him as a result of that incident.

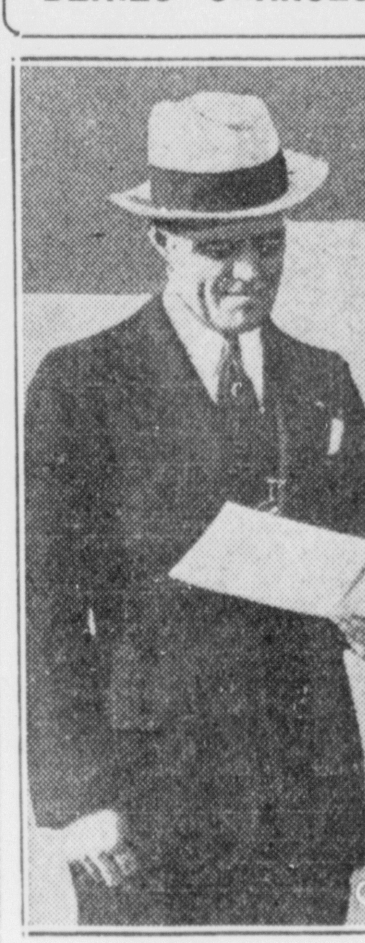

Whobrey gave his home address as 1628 Stern Ave., in Indianapolis but said he had been rooming at 129 Pulaski St., Dayton. He indicated to police he had wanted to get out of Dayton "quick" but offered no other explanation for his abduction of the taxicab driver.

home and then escaped in an auto. mobile.

Police were inclined to doubt Costanzo's explanation that he met Tardi by chance and decided to walk home with him. Detectives grilled the wounded man for hours in the belief that he had put Tardi on the "spot" and was sacrificed in the hall of gunfire.

Frank Candela, an active member in several Italian political societies was shot from ambush last night and killed by an assassin whom no one saw, apparently. Two pistol bullets were fired into Candela's head, but no one was able to say where the shots came from.

The congressman was not named. Rowbottom was defeated for re-election.

DEMAND TO RESCIND ACTION ENDORSING MRS. LEVAN LOOMS

Attack On Schorr May Feature Meet Of G.O.P.
Committee

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—Efforts to induce the Republican state central committee to rescind its endorsement of Mrs. Wilma Sinclair Levan, of Steubenville, as G. O. P. national committeewoman from Ohio, are expected to enliven the session of the committee here this afternoon.

The meeting, called by Commerce Director Edward D. Schorr, of Cincinnati, chairman of the committee, was announced with the avowed purpose of considering plans for permanent organization and ways and means of meeting the deficit of the state campaign conducted last year.

Statehouse politicians, however, predicted that Mrs. Katherine Kennedy Brown, of Dayton, would present a petition to the committee asking it to rescind its endorsement of Mrs. Levan. Mrs. Brown is a candidate for the position.

Another current report was that a number of the committeemen, said to be allied with the "insurgent" group of Republican state senators, were seeking to oust Schorr from the committee chairmanship.

As the result of the death of Mrs. Hugh Clark, also of Steubenville, while serving as Republican national committee woman from the Buckeye State, the committee has announced Mrs. Levan as Mrs. Clark's successor.

The action was the culmination of a stormy session during which a portion of the committee, including Chairman Schorr, sought to table the proposal to endorse Mrs. Levan. Attorney Fred W. Warner, of Marion, former chairman of the committee, and other friends of Mrs. Levan on the committee, however, charged that Governor Myers V. Cooper and Cleveland and Toledo G. O. P. "bosses" were trying to indicate who should serve as national committeewoman.

WEATHER FAVORING SECOND ATTEMPT TO NEGOTIATE FLIGHT

Mac Laren And Beryl
Hart Plan First Stop
At Bermuda

HAMPTON ROADS, Va., Jan. 7.—"So long. We'll be in Paris Friday," Lt. William S. McLaren and Mrs. Beryl Hart, red-headed and a competent aviator herself, shouted this farewell to officers at the local naval station today when they started their huge monoplane "Trade Wind" toward Bermuda, the first stop on their flight to Paris, with a commercial cargo.

The storm that swept the eastern coast yesterday had abated today. The weather was moderate and the waters of Chesapeake Bay and the Atlantic ocean were calm when naval mechanics pulled the airplane from its hangar and gave it a final inspection.

MacLaren and Mrs. Hart got up around 4 a. m. and examined the latest reports on the weather.

Their course to Bermuda and thence to Paris was favored by clear weather and the two were eager to get started.

They estimated they will land at Hamilton, Bermuda, for fuel, at noon and will take off immediately for Horta, in the Azores, arriving there at about 5 p. m. after this stop they will cross the broad expanse of the Atlantic to the Spanish coast and thence on to Le Bourget field in Paris.

If the flight is successful it will be the first time a commercial cargo of merchandise has been carried by air across the Atlantic. The cargo weighs several hundred pounds and includes cereals, flashlights and other articles.

This weight is in addition to the 250 gallons of gasoline and five gallons of oil that were loaded into the big craft yesterday.

Mrs. Hart announced that the purpose of their daring undertaking is to gain additional knowledge on ocean flights.

"We are going to take no chances, either going across or coming back," she said, "for our information will not be of any value if we leave it in the ocean."

They started off promptly at 6 a. m. and after circling the air station and waving farewell to the naval officers here, the "Trade Wind" started out to sea.

This is the second time that MacLaren and Mrs. Hart started out for Bermuda. Saturday, when they started their flight from New York, they said they could not find Bermuda because of bad weather and a broken sextant and they hastened here for shelter.

Today the airplane was equipped with a new, modern sextant which enables a navigator to compute his course from the stars at night. The other instrument was designed for only daylight use.

Mrs. Hart said she will relieve MacLaren at the controls. During their first flight Saturday she said she operated the airplane most of the way.

RANKIN WITHDRAWS IN DAUGHTERY CASE

WASHINGTON, C. H. O., Jan. 7.—Fayette County court officials today awaited word from Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall, of the Ohio supreme court, who will appoint a new judge to hear the case of Mal S. Daugherty, former president of the defunct Ohio State Bank here, charged with misappropriation of the bank's funds.

Judge Harry M. Rankin, of common pleas court, announced Tuesday that he would not preside in the case after Chief Justice Marshall left the matter entirely to the local jurist. Daugherty charged Judge Rankin with being prejudiced.

Daugherty has been ordered to appear in court Saturday to plead to an indictment on which a demurrer was overruled Monday. He has filed pleas in abatement to the other sixteen indictments returned by the grand jury several weeks ago.

MERGER OFFICIALS HALTED BY RULING

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 7.—What action officials of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. will take to attempt to effect the merger of Sheet and Tube with Bethlehem Steel Corporation remained unknown today, following a meeting here of the officers with their legal representatives in the office of Newton D. Baker, special counsel for the merger forces.

A statement which read that "no decisions of any sort were sought to be arrived at" concerning the future of the case, was issued by Baker following the meeting.

The session followed the action of Judge David G. Jenkins, who granted an injunction against the merger in Youngstown, Dec. 29 after a lengthy trial, in denying motion for a new trial in the suit.

GREETINGS

Editor, Gazette: We have been in the M. E. Home (our Home) three weeks. While do not know all about it I can say I am pleased with the reception extended me and the treatment and surroundings in general. Could not ask for better. Supt. C. L. Strecker and the matron, with their assistants, are using their best endeavors to maintain the reputation it has won by experience and careful study of the needs of this benevolent enterprise. All things are planned and executed with the needs of the aged in view. The Home is needing assistance to care for its 150 aged inmates. The Lord loveth a cheerful giver.

We also take this opportunity to thank our many friends in Xenia and elsewhere for their devotion, kindness and assistance through the years of suffering and at the death of my dear one, and for the sympathy and aid when I was left alone.

And now a few words to my hundreds of pupils found in many states of the Union. I met them often on the train, met them in Chicago, in Iowa, Kansas and even in Atlanta, Ga. getting many a hearty handshake. I find them in all walks of life and filling many posts of honor, trust and usefulness. As I am now nearing my 87th year and in all probability shall not be able to travel much would pronounce a benediction on each and every one of you on the sunny shore when the toll of life is over.

J. L. MILLER.

PLAYERS TO OFFER "MACBETH" FRIDAY AT YELLOW SPRINGS

JAMES HENDRICKSON

The Shakespeare Players of New York are performing in Macbeth at the Yellow Springs Opera House, Friday night, at 8 p. m.

The Shakespeare Players are now in their fourth successful season and advance notices speak highly of their appearances in leading schools and colleges including nearly every state university and many important colleges. The company which is headed by James Hendrickson and Claire Bruce includes also such well-known actors as John C. Hickey, Stanley Cobley, Webster Patterson, Martin Glover, Robert Greene, Martin Wells and others.

The Shakespeare Players productions follow somewhat the manner of the Coburns and Ben Greet. While their plays are handsomely costumed and correctly staged in every detail, cumbersome scenery is dispensed with. By thus eliminating waits between scenes greater continuity is obtained and a larger part of the original text is retained than is customarily employed in the conventional stage versions.

Tickets are on sale at popular prices and reservations may be made at Frances Shaw's Department Store, Yellow Springs.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

SECURING PEACE

The president of the German reich took advantage of a New Year's function to remind the world that "general disarmament is demanded not only as an act of international justice to Germany, but as the surest means of securing real universal peace."

As far as she alone is concerned, Germany, if she were guaranteed against the aggression of her neighbors, would perhaps be just as well off if her neighbors went on wasting their energies on armaments. The trouble is that the danger of attack cannot easily be removed, as long as contiguous chauvinistic peoples are armed to the teeth, while she remains defenseless.

The disarmament of Germany has been a blessing to her, as well as to the rest of the world, which eventually will enjoy the fruits of the intellectual emancipation for the service of peace, which followed the establishment of the republic and is attributable in no small degree to the drastic curtailment of her army and navy. As Emil Ludwig has recently pointed out:

The passing of all military ambitions and pretensions released for peaceful pursuits that portion of German scientists who had previously devoted themselves to war preparations. And as the glamor of a royal professorship has gone, hundreds of excellent minds whom professional and social considerations used to lure into academic chairs have now sufficiently grown out of their old prejudices to take positions with manufacturing concerns and thus, with greater monetary rewards and without interruption, to devote their energies to immediate practical ends.

The results of this release of energies are to be found in a new and fruitful era of German discovery and invention in applied science, as distinguished from speculation and pure research. The allies won the war; but in taking away Germany's arms, without discarding their own, they helped her toward winning the peace.

Viewed legally, von Hindenburg's statement is unvarnished truth. The allied negotiators at Versailles pledged themselves to each other, as well as to Germany, to move immediately from the disarmament of Germany to general disarmament. They have not kept their word. The greatest menace to world peace is not the armaments which still exist in Europe on a huge scale; but the spirit revealed by nations which, when ill, were saintlike in their professions, and now, when they are convinced they are not going to die, are unwilling to carry out the program solemnly undertaken by them at Versailles.

A HERO PASSES

Age and disease have conquered what the Germans could not at the Marne. Joffre is dead. The whole world will mourn his retirement from life's stage. Clemenceau died with a snarl. Joffre died at peace with the world and with himself. The last years of his life radiated a benignity successfully concealed by many of his countrymen.

Critics will continue to differ over Joffre's strategy in the early days of the war. They will be as far apart as he and those who disagreed with him at the time were. All will agree that he was a great soldier and a gentleman. Americans, whose history affords many instances of similar injustice, will not find it hard to understand the political intrigue that brought about his suspension from the supreme command of his country's armies. They will find in the history of their own or any other country few examples of men thus ignominiously treated, who have shown the same lofty disinterestedness and gone on fighting just as ardently in a subordinate capacity.

Joffre was a true soldier. There was no hate in his heart. The soldier's duty is to whip the enemy. The politician's privilege is to defame him. While others reviled Germany, Joffre's lips were never heard to utter an unkind word against the nation that for the moment was in arms against his own. As a result, Germany today bows in respectful silence. Von Tirpitz once called Joffre "a heart of oak." That was the soldier in him. The heart of the man was tender. Among all the military men the World War threw up in France, we recall no other who so perfectly exemplified the admirable qualities of his nation, as distinguished from the chauvinism of the boulevards, as did Joseph Jacques Cesaire Joffre.

A MAN UNDER PRESSURE

Do you want to know what your friend is like... in his heart... in his real self?

Then watch him Under Pressure. When things have gone against him. When he has a headache. When his work isn't going so well. When his job is slipping away from him. When there's grief in his heart. When his pride is hurt. When his wife's left him. When he's made an ass of himself. When life isn't so rosy.

That's when a man is tested. That's when you learn what he really is—Under Pressure.

I remember fellows who came up toward the front, in the war. They talked plenty some of them. They'd been all around the front, they'd done things, seen everything. And this sector was the quietest they'd ever been in. Then they went out to the front and action started and things got hot and shells started dropping and little gas shells went "boop" and airplanes did their stuff and shrapnel exploded overhead and they were Under Pressure. Well, sometimes a Loud Mouth collapsed and got a terrible toothache or trench fever and had to go back to a hospital, and sometimes a Loud Mouth settled down and showed us that he wasn't all talk and had something on the ball even though he was so loud and garrulous.

You couldn't tell in advance just how a fellow would act in wartime. You had to wait until the pressure of conflict began to bear down on him. Then you knew, unmistakably, then you knew whether he could stand the Gaff.

And you and your friend and all the rest of us are like those fellows in the war. You can't know them and we can't know ourselves until we are Under Pressure, until the strain begins and we strip away the little pretenses and the cheerful optimism and face trouble and temptation. We find ourselves then and unless we have very accommodating forgetteries, we never lose track again of what we are like—Under Pressure.

It's a useful thing to know—what we're like Under Pressure—more useful than money in the bank. If we know how we act Under Pressure, then we know we have something put by for a rainy day, and it will not fall us.

THE QUESTION BOX

—Central Press Wash. Bureau—

Answers to questions on information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, 1435 East Twelfth Street, Cleveland, O., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions, nor will the estimated value of old coins be given.

What is the highest mountain peak in the world? In North America? Where is the lowest point of dry land?

The highest mountain peak in the world is Mt. Everest, between Nepal and Tibet, in Asia. Its summit by the latest calculation, is 29,141 feet above sea level. In North America the highest peak is Mt. McKinley, 20,300 feet, in Alaska. The lowest point of dry land is the shore of the Dead Sea in Palestine, 1,290 feet below sea level.

Theristes
Who was Theristes?

In the Iliad of Homer Theristes was the ugliest and most impudent talker among the Greeks assembled at the siege of Troy. He is represented as reviling Agamemnon and Achilles, and is beaten by Odysseus for his insolence. Later writers said he was a son of Agrios, brother of Aeneas and was slain by Achilles, whom he had mocked after the death of Penthesilea.

Garden of the Gods
Where, in the United States, is the region known as the "Garden of the Gods"?

"The Garden of the Gods" is the name given to a region in Colorado, near Colorado Springs, covering about 500 acres and remarkable for the strange forms of the rocks with which it is covered. The red and white sandstone here assumes grotesque shapes to which various names have been given. The Gateway is formed by two huge masses of rock, of a bright red color, and 330 high, between which the road passes.

Foreign State
What state of the union was once called a foreign state? For what reason?

New Jersey was known as a foreign state and sometimes as New Spain for the reason that in 1817 the legislature passed a law authorizing aliens to purchase and hold real estate within the state. It is the opinion of most historians that this law was passed specifically to meet the case of Joseph Bonaparte, oldest brother of Napoleon I, who had been made King of Spain, but who subsequently fled to this country. He acquired a tract of about 1,400 acres of land at Bordentown, near Trenton, where he made his home for many years. There is no record that he ever became naturalized and under the law of 1817 there was no necessity for him to do so.

Form of Address
What is the correct form of addressing the president of the United States? A member of the cabinet?

The president of the United States should be addressed: "Dear Mr. President," or "My dear Mr. President." A member of the cabinet should be addressed as "Dear Mr. Secretary."

Fronda
What was the "fronda"?

The fronda was the name given to the period of domestic intrigues and political troubles in France during the minority of Louis XIV.

Bo-Broadway

—By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE—

PHILOSOPHY
NEW YORK CITY, New York—A carpenter, three months without work and with a wife and seven hungry kids, jammed a gun into his flask pocket the other morning and fared forth to level inequalities.

Apologetically he stuck up the driver of a milk wagon, demanding money. When the driver offered him milk instead, he accepted.

Then the driver, one of nature's noblemen, followed the erstwhile "stick-up man" home and notified the police.

As some philosopher once remarked: "You can't afford to have things given to you."

Writing of Man of War's son, Broadway Limited, the $65,000 race horse that fell and broke his neck in an event at Lincoln Fields last August, never having won a race, a sports writer said of him: "He died a maiden."

Longacre Lil speaking:
"If some of these wives really knew what we girls thought of their husbands, they'd cease to worry!"

Tom Mix, with his family on the rocks, and his magnificent home in Beverly Hills closed up, was talking of all that had gone before:

"I didn't need that estate to make me happy," he said. "I didn't need yachts, or $75,000 worth of automobiles. Every time I went in to that house my boots skidded from under me and I landed on my neck. Go on an' laugh! I said to the butler one day, when I noticed him with his hand over his mouth. I was just gettin' up from the floor. 'Go on an' laugh, I was just tryin' to be entertainin'!"

The truth is that Wagner, Dill and Patterson, all three of them, were and are mighty doubtful of Nye, whether in their own respect-

THE MARCH OF CIVILIZATION

SENATOR FROM VERMONT, STAUNCH STANDPATTER, HELPS RADICAL PROBER

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—Next to Senator Nye, Senator Porter H. Dale of Vermont has had more than any other single individual to do with starting the present rumormongering in the G. O. P. national committee.

And he was the one man, among the entire five assigned to investigate last fall's various senatorial campaigns, upon whom peace-loving politicians had depended most implicitly to prevent the inquiry from degenerating into anything unpleasant.

Nye was recognized long before he was appointed chairman of the investigators, as the type of solon who would stir up the ingredients for trouble whenever and wherever he found them.

Party strings were not relied on to hold the North Dakotan. It was by keeping him ignorant of what was going on that the bosses (on both sides) expected to head him off from creating a lot of scandals.

Only very, very nominally a Republican, the merest glance at his record reveals him as a thoroughly lawless specimen of progressiveism. Worse, from the politically cautious and pacific standpoint, he is desperately conscientious. He has nerve also.

Being so unmanageable, by rights he ought not to have been trusted with the investigatorial chairmanship, but it's a mean job, several senators had sidestepped it, and finally Vice President Curtis risked naming him—mayhap believing (as suggested above) that experienced electioneers would have little difficulty in steering him away from what they did not want to do.

If so, the v. p. was mistaken. Impelled by his independence, his conscience, his nerve, indefatigable industry and an alarming flare for facts, of which no one had suspected him, the young chief inquirer soon was raising particular Cain. The G. O. P. national committee minkup was the climax, but plenty of mischief-making, of his inspiration, had led up to it.

Matters would not have been so bad, however, had it not been for Senator Dale, of all improbable persons to figure as Nye's principal collaborator in such a program.

But for Dale, the remaining three members of the investigatorial body would have served as a tolerably effective brake upon their chairman's activities.

Sensors Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and Clarence C. Dill of Washington, the two Democratic members, of course, took considerable interest in the digging up of unfavorable publicity for the dominant party in Republican territory, but they had urgent business elsewhere when a Jeffersonian state was to be invaded. Indeed, they looked askance upon an excess of zeal to please the ceiling Commander. If you don't mind I think I should like to take a walk around.

If I am going to live with you for a while I ought to know something about my headquarters, hadn't I? And I should get acquainted with the Red Ants, too. What Peter did not tell Red Ant Commander was that he wanted to take a walk to see if he could find a sign of Busy. As a matter of fact he really didn't care whether he ever became acquainted with a Red Ant or not—but he thought if he made friends with some of them, maybe one of them would "let the cat out of the bag" and tell him news of the dear old friend he had set out to find.

dependability—in precisely the sense that political leadership is in the habit of interpreting dependability.

Such is the senator who has stood by Gerald P. Nye, through thick and thin, from the very beginning of the current senatorial campaign investigation, straight on up into the midst of today's violent hair-pulling in the ranks of his own party management.

Imagine Dale of Vermont, helping with might and main to build up a case for the arch-insurrector, Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska against the G. O. P. national committee!

However, it isn't necessary to imagine it. It actually has occurred.

How account for it? There is no possible way but one—Vermont granite probity.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

—By MRS. MARY MORTON—

Creamed Oysters Hot Biscuits
New York Salad
Jam Cuke Coffee
This menu is intended for luncheon or supper. The oyster dish is especially nice for Sunday night supper.

Today's Recipes

Creamed Oysters.—One pint oysters, three tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one-half teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, one egg yolk, one cup thin cream or milk. Clean oysters, heat to boiling point and drain. Cook butter, flour and cream five minutes. Add oysters and egg, stir until thoroughly hot, and serve on buttered toast, crackers or hot biscuits. Two tablespoons chopped mushrooms will greatly improve the dish.

New York Salad.—Four slices pineapple, one-half cup celery, one-half cup nuts chopped, two oranges, cream mayonnaise, lettuce. Arrange slices of pineapple on nests of lettuce leaves. Cut celery in slender strips, one and one-half inches long and mix with nut meats. Pile in center of pineapple and garnish with four sections of orange, free from membrane, laid symmetrically on pineapple. Pass dressing separately.

Jam Cake.—One-half cup shortening, one cup sugar, two eggs, one and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon cloves, one-half teaspoon allspice, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one-half cup buttermilk, one-half cup jam, one-half cup nut meats, one-half cup candied fruit (citron, orange peel, cherries or pineapple). Cream the shortening and add the sugar gradually. Add the well beaten eggs. Sift the flour once before measuring. Sift the flour, soda and spices together and add alternately with the buttermilk. Add the jam, then the nuts and fruit. Pour into well greased and floured pan and bake 45 minutes in 350 degrees Fahrenheit, moderate oven.

Caramel Ice.—One tablespoon vanilla, one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons cream, three-fourths cup brown sugar. Mix all the ingredients and boil three or four minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from fire and continue beating until creamy. Spread on top and sides of cake.

Diet Used In Irregularity Cases

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.—

Diet is generally recognized as one of the very important methods of treatment of constipation. To be effective, however, it must be fitted to the individual needs of the particular patient.

There is a great deal of confusion about constipation in the minds both of the public and the medical profession. When a person says, "I am constipated," he usually means something more than absence of regularity. He means a set of sensations for one thing. And he means that some drug or treatment is used to promote regular evacuations.

Some of these sensations—their name is legion—are headache, backache, biliousness, bad taste in the mouth, spots before the eyes, sensation or eruptions on the skin—thousands of others. The things people do for the treatment of constipation are almost as numerous—diet, fruits and vegetables, cathartics, exercise, massage of the abdomen, cannonball rolling of the abdomen, etc.

But the fact that these two elements predominate in the history—the symptoms ascribed to a disease and the antiquated treatment of it—indicate that most "constipated" people are really living more in fear of the condition than actually having it.

In fact, if I were asked what the principal cause of constipation was I should say fear of constipation. Fear of constipation. Or, in other words, and every doctor who has studied the question will agree with me, the principle cause of constipation is the use of cathartics or (almost the same thing) a diet with too much roughage in it.

It is true, some people need roughage and the stimulation which non-absorbable material in the food gives to the colon. But many more have sensitive colons, and the roughage and the cathartics irritate the inside of these bowels, causing an irritation which gives them the sensation of incomplete evacuation and drives them to take more roughage or more cathartics. Thus a vicious circle is started, and such cases of constipation can be cured only by withdrawal of the cathartics and the substitution of a smooth diet for a rough one.

The dietary treatment of constipation, then, is not so simple as adding roughage to the food. Nor is simple regularity the only object of treatment. What is also wanted is the banishment of the constipated feelings—the symptoms of fullness or sluggishness in the bowel, of headache, fear, biliousness, etc. There are, in fact, many people who do not have daily evacuations who are not constipated at all. A medical friend of mine tells of a gymnasium teacher, in the pink of health and vigor, who consulted him because she had an evacuation only once a week. She said she would never have come to him but that her family kept nagging her and protesting that something must be the matter, and demanding that she see a doctor. The doctor could find nothing wrong with her and gave a card saying—"Miss Blank is to be allowed to have an evacuation as infrequently as she pleases."

Some people have very sensitive colons and are made worse on the usual roughage diet for constipation. They need a smooth diet. Others for whom the roughage diet is well adapted need stimulation to the colon. These articles will be described in the following articles.

Other Dates Sure To Cure Friend

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: You are helping so many others, won't you please help me? I am so unhappy and afraid. For several months I have been going with a young man whom I simply adore. Of course I am not blind to his faults, and among them is that he is so conceited. He has told me that he loves me, and I believe him. I have never told him I love him, but he can surely read it in my actions.

"Somehow I am afraid. I do not know why or of what. Maybe my intuition is telling me some other girl is wrong. I know Dick loves me and I love him, and my family just adores him. The trouble is that he does not pay enough attention to me in the matter of dates. Oh, yes, he watches me and has fits if I have a date with anyone else, and he does not let other girls, but he just doesn't pay enough attention to me. I want to bring him closer to me and I do not know how to do it.

"He works in a neighboring city, and I see him every afternoon as he comes from his office, and usually of a night as he passes the place where I am employed. But he does not take me home after work, and asks for a date about once a week. I wish you would give me some advice, please. Thank you very much.

"BILLIE"
Probably the answer to his casual attitude is his own self-sufficiency. Billie, you say he is conceited, so possibly he thinks the amount of attention he pays you is honor enough for you. He might have to limit his dates on account of money, but he could walk home with you without spending money, I suppose.

Your love for him and fear of losing him makes you afraid. You are afraid to take an independent stand for fear he will be angry and stop dating you at all. Is that it? It does seem that one date a week is rather few, if he loves you devotedly.

You can bring him to time by accepting other dates, you know, and telling him frankly that you want to go out more. Cast out the fear complex and be independent, dear. The boy friend will probably like you all the more for it. And if you lose him? Well, you know that saying about there being a good fish in the sea at every corner!

S. B. D.: I think it would be very unwise to date this boy again dear. First thing you know you will be in serious trouble. If you will be in serious trouble and respect, better keep apart or see one another only when others are present.

E. M. Y.: A delay of five days is necessary in Michigan after the marriage license is obtained. If the law is enforced, you should, to make a marriage legal, give your right names and addresses.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have never before written you, but when you asked me mothers just what we would do if informed that our son's girl friend was to have a child by him, I could not resist an answer. If I will say I would not only insist that my son marry her and treat her as I would want my daughter to be treated under similar circumstances, but I would help the law force him to do so, if he refused to assume willingly his share of the responsibility.

"I must add that I am very, very sorry that so many girls are so lacking in self-control; and to those I would say, snap right out of that attitude of assuming full responsibility and insist that he marry you immediately.

AN ADMIRER.
Thank you very much, Admirer. Your letter cheered me and I am proud of the attitude the boys' mothers take. You may have seen other letters in the column from mothers who thought the same as you.

Foot Shape Determined In Infancy

—By GLADYS GLAD—

A skilled foot specialist has recently informed me that a large percentage of the foot disorders found in adults are incurred during childhood, as a result of parental neglect. He feels that any neglect of a child's feet by its parents is most deplorable, because of the great influence that the parents can exert on the health, comfort and shape of their offspring's feet and limbs. More than one bow-legged, knock-kneed or pigeon-toed damsel might have been spared her blunders had her mother been more attentive to her pedal extremities during her infancy and adolescence.

We all know how important and how necessary good foot health is to beauty. And feet can be kept healthy, strong and supple all through life. But the responsibility of this begins with the parents.

A baby's feet are almost always perfect. And it's up to the parents to keep them perfect. Only in rare instances are children born with a structural defect of the feet. The various arches of the infant's feet are at first held in position by fleshy paddings. But when muscular development begins, the pads of flesh are absorbed and the feet begin to show that they are arched.

It is at this time the feet must be especially guarded. For care must be taken that the delicate bones are not bent and misshaped, and the growing feet weakened and deformed. And it is at this time that the parents can endanger the foot health of their children by attempting to teach them to walk.

Infants should not be taught to walk. If the child is normal, walking will be a normal function at such time as the infant feels that it can safely start to move about by means of its pedal extremities. All means employed to hasten this function should be discarded, harm may result.

If children's shoes are selected wisely, and their feet regularly examined, minor defects can usually be corrected, and future foot health and comfort assured.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Cosmetics
G. H. G.: I would suggest that you use a rouge with more yellow in it and a lighter shade of powder. Try using a soft peach shade of powder. A light lipstick will harmonize with your natural coloring.

Reduce Bust
Worried: It would be impossible for me to print my method of reducing the bust in this limited space. The process is fully explained in my booklet on "The New Figure Lips."

P. S.: The only way I know of in which you can have your lips made smaller is by plastic surgery. Such an operation should be performed only by a most skillful surgeon.

EDITOR'S NOTE: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin, for each, to cover cost of printing and mailing. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

A new basketball league, to be composed of teams representing the nine Granges in Greene County, is understood to be in process of formation, although the circuit is not expected to become operative until the 1931-32 season.

R. C. Bailey, Spring Valley, is chairman of the committee selected to get the league organized, other members being Donald Mossman, Jamestown, and Horace Ferguson, Beavercreek.

Granges at Spring Valley, Jamestown and Beavercreek Twp. are already supposed to have teams which hold regular practices and several games between the various Granges represented by teams will probably be played this season.

Other Granges in the county include Xenia, Beavercreek, Charity (Dayton Pike), Pleasant at Bowersville, Miami and Cedar at Cedarville.

Just for the sake of novelty, the Lang Chevrolet Falcons, after playing Hartwell College of Commerce, Springfield, at the armory here Wednesday night, will play a game away from home next week.

The Xenia pro court quintet is booked to meet the noted Alpha Reds at Wapakoneta, O., next Tuesday night. The Wapakoneta team only recently gave the Dayton Kellys a warm evening's entertainment before submitting to a 37 to 30 defeat and the Falcons will have to be better than just good to win, if comparative scores mean anything, which they often don't.

The next home appearance of the Falcons will be made January 15 against Harmon Hall of Lebanon, a pro team which the Xenia basketballers defeated by a small margin in their season's opener.

Just how long the current mediocre basketball team representing Dayton Stivers High will be able to maintain that school's unbroken string of victories on the hardwood is one of the leading questions of the times in Ohio court circles.

Stivers is credited with forty-six straight victories, accumulated over a period of the last three seasons, the Orange Crushers, minus four regulars from last season, being undefeated to date, although having several close calls.

A Stivers basketball team has not known the meaning of defeat since the 1928-29 quintet dropped a close one to Morton High at Chicago, Ill. while on a trip.

The present Stivers team is certain to lose a game sooner or later and it will about break the collective hearts of the members of the team when this time comes—as come it will.

Marking his first appearance in his home town in more than a year, Joe Seykra, Dayton light-heavy, and Rosey Rosales, Indian fighter, have been matched at Dayton for a 12-round division bout at Memorial Hall Tuesday night, January 13.

Rosales holds a one-round victory over Joe, scored in a Buffalo ring last summer. Seykra was under suspension by the N. B. A. for running out on the Indian in a return bout that had been arranged for Dayton last spring, but now that he has signed articles for the go, he has been reinstated in good standing.

Rosales has been busy during the last few months knocking out Art Weigand, the Buffalo scrapper, in one round at Erie, Pa., and holding the sensational Battling Bozo to a draw in his home town of Birmingham, Ala., while Joe has been forced into idleness on account of his suspension. Rosales is being favored to win, some going so far as to pick him to flatten the Dayton boy in short order.

The Xenia Shoes won two out of three games from the Lang Chevrolet Co. in a Recreation League bowling match Tuesday night, the last-placers escaping a shutout by taking the last game by a margin of two pins. Bertman led a series of 569 for the winners and Leach topped Langs with 529. Box score:

CEDARVILLE WILL TACKLE FINDLAY

After a layoff of two weeks during the holiday period, Cedarville College's basketball team will resume its season's schedule Friday night this week, playing Findlay College at Findlay, O. The next home game for the Yellow Jackets is with Wilmington College at Cedarville January 13. The Borsmen dropped their first three games of the season to Rio Grande, Xavier and University of Dayton and are still in quest of their first victory.

KEEPING IT HOT Stove League Gossip

Shano Collins, the latest Moses elected to lead the Boston Red Sox out of the desert of defeat, has already set a record. He is the first rookie manager who has assumed the job of bossing a team that has succeeded in winning the cellar berth eight times in nine tries.

Except for one season—1924—the Red Sox have been last for nine years. This beats the A's great (or awful) mark of being last seven straight years.

Thus have the once mighty Boston fallen. For the first eighteen years of their American League

VATICAN WILL SOON THROW OPEN GREAT GALLERY, IS SAID

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 7.—The world's most perfect and magnificent art gallery soon is to be opened to the public. It has been built specially on plans by the famous Italian architect and art critic, Senator Beltrami, to house more worthily the art treasures owned by the Vatican. These will be shown in stupendous progression, culminating in the central hall with the Raphael's works.

The religious paintings by Italian Masters will start with Giotto and his brotherhood of painters of the thirteenth century, only a few frescoes, recovered from Rome Churches, and dating of the ninth and tenth centuries, giving an idea of the dawn of religious art, together with some words of the biazino school.

Another room will show works by Melozzo da Forlì and his pupils and friends; a following room will display triptychs by famous painters (Lippi, Crivelli and others) while the next room will be dedicated to pre-Raphael painters like Perugino, Pinturicchio, Montagna and so on.

Then will come the most important hall completely given up to Raphael of whom "The Transfiguration" will be shown, flanked by the "Madonna of Foligno" and the "Coronation of Mary" on the same wall. The other walls will be taken up by the famous ten tapestries by Raphael.

The painters of the Fifteenth centuries will be shown in a next room: Tiziano, Andrea del Sarto, Veronese, Sodoma; another room will exhibit more modern painters like Caravaggio, Domenichino, Giorgione, Tiziano, Leonardo da Vinci, Andrea del Sarto, Veronese and finally Murillo and Ribera.

WOMAN INDICTED ON MURDER CHARGE

CALDWELL, O., Jan. 7.—Mrs. Iva Wickham, mother of two young children, was held in Noble County jail here today under a first-degree murder indictment in connection with the killing of her husband, a former teacher at Summerfield, their home.

The county grand jury indicted the woman Tuesday after she had been held for several weeks. She was arrested at her home several hours after the shooting occurred. Mrs. Wickham at first contended that her husband committed suicide and a verdict to that effect was returned by the coroner. Further investigation, however, showed that Wickham had been murdered. Authorities said the woman later signed a written confession that she shot and killed her husband as he sat in a chair reading and smoking.

APPROPRIATION OF $1,072,838 ASKED FOR HOME IN XENIA

Appropriations of $1,072,838 to operate the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home and $714,845 to run the state-supported Combined Normal and Industrial Department of Wilberforce University for the next two years are advocated in a biennial budget submitted by Governor Myers Y. Cooper to the Ohio General Assembly Tuesday.

The detailed budget requests for 1931 and 1932 recommend an appropriation of $658,529 for the Xenia Home for 1931 and $414,309 for 1932, while for Wilberforce University's state-controlled branch, the chief executive suggested an appropriation of $472,025 for 1931 and $442,820 for 1932.

Governor Cooper also anticipates in his budget that grouped together, six higher educational institutions in Ohio, including Wilberforce University, should produce $1,329,500 from fees in 1931 and $1,330,000 the year following.

Anticipated fees from Wilberforce are estimated at $13,500 in 1931 and $14,000 in 1932, this university being grouped with Ohio State University, Ohio University, Kent State Normal, Miami and Bowling Green, as producing, collectively, the second most productive source of income to the state.

TOBACCO COMPANY REVEALS FAITH IN NEWSPAPERS' ADS

The American Tobacco Co. and its subsidiary The American Cigar Co. are opening the new year by placing in the newspapers of the country the largest Lucky Strike advertising campaign and the largest Cremo Cigar advertising campaign in the history of either company.

"Our agents are today forwarding orders for these campaigns," said George W. Hill, president of the American Tobacco Co., Wednesday. "The great growth in the sale of these popular brands—unprecedented in the tobacco industry—has been made possible by the power of newspaper advertising. We are again in 1931 increasing our newspaper advertising expenditure because we believe that this year, like 1930, will be a year of bigger business with us. Frankly we do appreciate the power of public opinion generated through proper and intelligent newspaper advertising."

CHAPTER 45

The man was Vernon La Cossit. Just then, he turned their way and recognized Joretta. He seemed to take an inventory of her group and then came directly over to her.

"Why, Jettie it's good to see you here. What a surprise. Where are you staying, what's the news."

"What are you doing in Chicago, Vernon?" The news is, meet my husband, and Miss Davis, and Mr. Andrews.

"Your husband? Hold a net for me, somebody! Well, say, what about Williams?" His remarks rattled on, when he had acknowledged the introductions.

"I don't believe you did. But he was the engineer on dad's yacht. Perhaps you saw him there."

He held off and gazed at her with astonishment. "Aw, tell me something I can believe."

"It's true, nevertheless," she smiled.

"Um, pretty soft for him."

"As a result, dad has disowned me. We eloped, you know. But Jim didn't marry me for money."

"Oh, yeah? You surprise me. Well, he looks like a good chap. Too bad your old man got mulish over it. Nothing to kick about that I can see."

"Only that he hasn't a fortune. But he'll have some day."

"Well, whether he does or not, I'll say he's a lucky guy just having you," he insisted gallantly.

And at the very hour they were discussing his mulishness, Allan Dowling was immersed in difficulties of his own. He had been pouring funds into his new adventure at an alarming rate and for weeks there had been no further promise of returns. Like dropping water into the ocean.

Then, just the day before, the peon had struck another vein of gold-streaked ore, even more promising than the first one. Hurrah! he would get his money back now, and big dividends besides. He now had two bags of the precious metal in his office safe. But the problem was how to keep his contract. Before he could take out more ore, he had agreed to pay Lopez $100,000 in cash. Where to get it, he did not know. There were possible resources which he might tap, but he didn't dare. He had taken money from the business, sold good bonds and arranged some loans already. It was worth the risk; but there were limits to which he could go in this thing. He awaited Lopez.

Presently, he came, very bland and genial. "At last, the senior finds the beer strike he await for so long. My bien. Get see now that you are satisfied with the bargain?"

"Perfectly. But I sent for you to see if I might alter the contract slightly. I am badly pressed for funds, and now that I am actually getting out the gold, I wonder if you could wait with me to benefit by the profits."

While he talked, the Spaniard's bland geniality faded into surprise, wonder, disappointment, disgust, anger. When he could speak coherently, he protested:

"But, Senior Dowling, you have made the contract. Let see for you keep eet to the letter—or get out of the mine that sees then no longer yours," he fairly hissed.

Lopez brightened instantly, and snuggly agreed to be on hand promptly.

Dowling's "some way" involved many strange maneuvers for the rest of that day and the next. He cashed all the bonds he had in his own name and some that he had been holding for Joretta. He withdrew stock from his own company and sold it at a sacrifice and, most loathsome of all to him, he took his wife's pearls from the safety deposit vault, secretly, and pawned them. His only reassurance was that he would have them all back, and more, within a short time.

So the deal was closed to everyone's satisfaction. Dowling had his gold mine all to himself and Jose Lopez, alas! had sacrificed a vast fortune for a mere handful of cash. So he lamented. If only he had been able to develop the mine himself! But, then, no use to wish for what never could have been. And with much gracious bowing and smiling and shaking of hands, Lopez departed, reminding Dowling again that he would be interested to know from time to time, just how things were progressing.

Dowling saw him depart with a sigh of thankfulness. Now to business. There were all kinds of arrangements to be made with various authorities and employees. Better get a bigger force of men. That would mean a bigger supply of rations, and he needed more lumber for timbering. Working tools and materials, too. It was costing him plenty. Well, he should clean up, ten to one, or more.

Strenuous business, though. A man had no right to go into a new venture as big as that at his age. Too much anxiety and strain. It had proved a much bigger proposition than he had expected. And yet, what would he have been doing all this time? Practically nothing! It was good for a man and his brain to be busy.

Both the man his brain would have received a severe shock, could he have witnessed the performance in Carmelita's flat a half hour after. The girl and Mike had spent the day, confined with heavy suspense, while their tool obeyed instructions in their behalf.

At his customary signal, they both jumped from their chairs to push the electric button that released the door lock. Lopez arrived so breathlessly excited that he could not speak for some moments.

Ackerman has announced that he would present several bills, but few expected he would be in haste to get even one introduced so early.

Kerman's first bill, if passed by three-fifths of the senate, and approved in the form in which Nippert presented it, would result in a referendum on November 2.

Senator Herner, though a pronounced wet, doubted today whether a three-fifth vote can be mustered, even in the senate.

Refracting charges that the house and the senate each should favor repeal on a basis of the Bulkey-McCulloch senatorial election returns, Herner was afraid the long wrangle will fail to get approval of a referendum, and a similar attitude was being taken secretly by other wet leaders.

Other bills which will go to both houses soon will ask repeal of the Crabbe and Miller enforcement acts and the Dow-Alken liquor tax law.

Though both bills were introduced by Republicans, they are not parts of party legislation, Republicans, including Senator Earl R. Lewis of St. Clairsville, senate president pro tem, asserted again today. Democrats will have as many prohibition repeal bills to present as Republicans, he predicted, and, as usual on the wet and dry question, party lines will be forgotten when the issue reaches a vote.

A rural-urban fight, led by Ackerman for Cleveland and Nippert for Cincinnati, for the cities, and Representative William L. Guard (R) of Urbana, for the smaller cities towns and farm districts, promises to develop when the bills finally reach the floors of the two houses for a roll call.

MARSHAL JOFFRE IS LAID TO REST WHILE NATION GRIEVES

The United States military services.

The cortege reached the Place De La Concorde one hour and twenty-five minutes after its start from Notre Dame. As it passed the statue of Strasbourg, a band softly played the Marseillaise.

The tremendous crowd gathered here was estimated at as many as 400,000 persons.

Exactly two hours after leaving the Cathedral of Notre Dame, the cortege arrived at Les Invalides and the procession came to an end. Carefully the coffin was lifted from the gun carriage and carried inside, there to rest for some months a few steps from the tombs of Napoleon Bonaparte and Marshal Ferdinand Foch.

The coffin was brought to Notre Dame last night without pomp or extensive ceremony. At the Arc de Triomphe, where France's unknown soldier rests, it halted for a few moments while the police sounded "aux champs" and cannon boomed. Then it moved on to Notre Dame, where the cortege arrived at 10 p. m.

The portals were closed, and

BIG SISTER—Doubts

By LESLIE FORGRAVE

ART ACORD

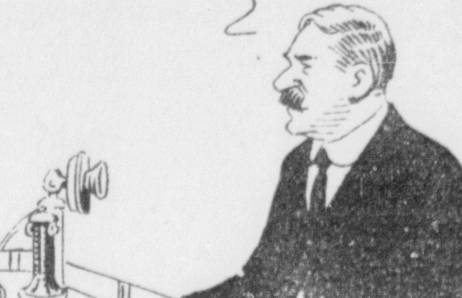

On the other side of the hill from these young players is the case of Art Acord, one-time star of Western pictures, who has just ended it all in Chihuahua City.

When husband and wife sit on the same jury the jury disagrees.

"How's this for a saving idea? I bought playing cards that can be washed!"

"Well, I don't mind doing dishes—but I draw the line at SCRUBBING the DECK!"

NO, NO, HE CAN'T MEAN THAT HE DIDN'T GET THE PICTURE OR HE'D HAVE COME RIGHT OUT AND TOLD ME, IT'S NOT LIKE MEL TO QUIBBLE!
STILL, HE DIDN'T SAY HE DID GET IT!
I'LL BE IN A PRETTY FIX IF HE FAILS
ME NOW, AFTER I'VE PROMISED TO SHOW THIS PICTURE TO THE CROWD AT THE CLUB.

RACKETEERING NOT CONFINED TO CRIME WORLD IS CLAIMED

Paul Blanshard, former associate editor of The Nation and well-known lecturer, talked on "Racketeering High and Low" at the first Antioch College assembly after the Christmas holidays Monday. A keen critic of American and British economic and political life, a first-hand observer of conditions in Russia, in Italy under Mussolini, and in China during the revolution, Mr. Blanshard held his audience's interest and sympathy while he pointed out the weaknesses of modern economic organization. By "racketeering," he said, he meant "any scheme whereby human parasites graft themselves upon labor life and gain a living without working for it, whether the method be terrorism or manipulation."

"The habit of getting something for nothing is the essence of racketeering," he went on, "and it is found in the upper circles as well as the lower reaches of society. In fact, the Chicago gangster in a sense belongs to the economic age in which he lives. He is often merely an imitator of the higher classes of the society of which he is a part."

"It is estimated that the weekly liquor bill in Chicago is $5,785,000, of which three-fourths is profit and $137,000,000 is a modest estimate of the yearly profit for the gangsters. Now what can you do with $137,000,000 a year? The answer is—you can buy almost any municipal government in America; you can pay off most of the gangsters, give 10,000 policemen $20 a week pocket money, and leave about $87,000,000 for the 'big shots' of prohibition. But what I am most interested in is how this spreads among the 'upper crust.' It is because the upper crust of Chicago cooperates, because it wants its liquor, wants it good, and will pay for it, that the lower racketeering goes on."

"We usually forget that public morals are apt to be a reflection of the private morals in business life. We have two sets of morals for judging racketeers—in business life we call it scientific manipulation; in political life it's just a racket. Public officials caught in a great scandal just 'go out.' Private business men get honorary degrees, political votes and pensions."

Mr. Blanshard went on to discuss the racketeers of high finance, advertising, and gambling, and politics.

"These are symptoms of the kind of social system in which we live," he concluded. "If there is any fundamental cause of racketeering it is this: first, our business civilization has become too complex for our comprehension and control, and second, with the development of modern complex life our standards of work have degenerated. You here at Antioch College do not need that lesson of work pointed out to you. But it is becoming popular to earn a living by absent ownership and manipulation at long range. There was a time when it was true that our civilization was based on hard work, but that time is past. The farther you get away from hard, unremitting labor, the farther up you go in the social scale."

"I think that the biggest job an educated man or woman can do is not that of climbing the social ladder and getting as much as he can for nothing, but that of working toward a day when every man shall make a decent living through his own efforts, and when economic wealth shall be considered something held in trust for the community."

COLUMBUS FIRM GETS CONTRACT FOR KRESGE ADDITION IN XENIA

Contract for erection of a modern business building on the site of the Clara Allen Bldg. on S. Detroit St., now being razed, was awarded by the S. S. Kresge Co. Tuesday to the Branch Construction Co., Columbus.

The amount of the successful bid is understood to have been approximately $30,000, the contract specifying for completion of the building sometime in April.

The two-story structure will rise adjacent to the Kresge company's 5, 10 and 25 cent store and will be operated as a 25 cent to $1 store.

The Kresge company's thirty-year lease of the site also includes six and one-half to eight feet of the adjoining building also owned by Clara Allen, reducing the frontage of the H. L. Sayre drug store to less than eighteen feet.

The stairway separating the two buildings, leading to rooms on the second floor utilized by the drugist and Xenia Twp. trustees, will also be torn away, giving the company a frontage of eighty and one-half feet, as its lease specifies.

SELF-CONFESSED "TOUGH GUY" SUBDUED BY COUNTY OFFICERS

A series of charges including resisting an officer, transporting liquor and drunkenness may be lodged against C. E. Goodyear, 30, of 224 1/2 Neal Ave., Columbus, apprehended by authorities on the Columbus Pike, three miles east of Cedarville, early Tuesday night. The arrest was made following a complaint received from Clayton McMillan that a sedan had torn down a portion of a fence along his farm. McMillan notified Hayes McLean, marshal of Cedarville, who communicated with Sheriff John Baughn.

Sheriff Baughn, L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, and Marshal McLean made a joint investigation and found the sedan in a ditch, with motor still running and Goodyear seated at the wheel. The officers also discovered Goodyear possessed a pint and a half of corn whiskey.

The prisoner did not submit calmly to being taken to jail but resisted his captors all during the return drive in the county car to Xenia.

Goodyear's wrists were handcuffed but his legs were not and he managed to kick the glass out of a door of the car, whereupon Davis, who was driving, made the first of several stops, while efforts were made to subdue him. Davis planted a right to the prisoner's nose and the sheriff followed with a blow to the head with his blackjack. Goodyear was stunned momentarily but, according to his own admission, was a "tough guy," and he soon recovered sufficiently to continue his struggles. The sheriff finally sat upon him.

The sedan Goodyear was driving may be attached by the Columbus Pike farmer in lieu of payment for damage done to the fence along his property.

"Musical Aviators" Can Fly As Well As Play Music

By MILDRED MASON
"A good musician makes a good aviator and a good aviator makes a good musician," says Tom Truesdale, son of a southern Methodist minister and director of the orchestra, known as "The Musical Aviators." These musicians are heard every day in a program over the CBS network, over station WKRC, Cincinnati, at 1 p. m.

Every one of the eleven musicians in the band is an aviator. The orchestra cooperatively owns two sport model, open cockpit planes which they tune up daily for pleasure spins in between playing over the CBS network and at a New York hotel. Truesdale has invented a new rhythm which he calls the "aeroplane tempo." It isn't fast or it isn't slow and it is extremely collegiate. Another feature of the orchestra is that all members are dressed in aviator's uniforms when they are broadcasting in the studio. Wouldn't you like to see them?
